FROM THE RECORDS OF THE MIAMI COUNTY BOARD OF HEALTH.

In Miami County exclusive of cities during the five years 1921-25 inclusive, there were 73 violent deaths from external causes.

There were 14 suicides, 51 deaths from accidents, 1 from freezing, 1 by starvation, 3 killed by lightning, 2 by other electrical shocks, 1 met violent death by unknown cause, there were no murders.

The cause of accidents is educationally interesting.

Drowning here is the most important cause of accidental deaths. It seems that all children should learn to swim early; also that everybody should know how to administer some simple method of artificial respiration.

Boy Scouts Movements, Y. M. C. A's and Summer camps foster swimming lessons, and the teaching of artificial respiration. At least one quick thinking and quick acting adult should accompany all youthful bathers.

The important cause of automobile accidents is inattention of the driver. Even experts drivers have their attention occasionally diverted. The automobilist traveling alone rarely has an accident.

Fire Arms were the favorite means of suicide (5), the swallowing of poison, suffocation by gas, cutting of an artery, and drowning were each employed to cause a suicide. Hanging was used by 3 suicides.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Smith and daughters, Miss Annette, of Richmond, Ind. are here as the guests of Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kelsey expecting to remain for the remainder of the week.

Now and then some Covington woman gives us the impression that the only reason she married her husband was to have him around where she could devote all of her time to telling him what ails him.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry-Long and daughters, Miss Marjorie June and Esther, Miss Evelyn Martin and Miss Roberta Jennings, spent last evening at Evergreen Lake.

Training a Violin Maestro

Stanley Weiner, aged sixteen and a half months, son of Michael Weiner, well known Baltimore violinist, is destined to be a future maestro. Weiner's theory is, given a normal, healthy child, you can make a world famous genius of him if you start immediately he is born and keep at it slowly but steadily. Stanley knows as much at his age as Kreisler or Elman knew at five or six years, it is claimed. He is shown above with his father.

"MORMON TEMPLE SECRETS"

Mrs. Lulu Loveland Shepherd of Salt Lake City, Utah, gave a lecture to women, last evening, upon the deep and dark secrets of the Mormon Temple.

Mrs. Shepherd lived over twenty-five years in Salt Lake, and is a gifted and interesting speaker. Some of the secret methods used by this semi-heathen religion to capture the government were astounding. Six hundred of their missionaries are now scattered throughout the states in a summer campaign.

The education of their young men and women in our state universities and great institutions of learning, sending Mormons to our Senate and House were a part of the propaganda used, which should cause alarm to all.

Magazines and other publications are controlled by them, many who read are unaware of the Mormon sentiment placed among writings. The ownership of the "Literary Digest," was said to be under the control of those who held that faith.

Mrs. Shepherd has lectured for over ten years upon this subject in America, Canada and Great Britain and has many times thwarted the growth of this cult, and in new Albany N. Y., a great temple of worship was voted out by the citizens, which had been planned by Mormons. Mrs. Shepherd speaking night after night broke up the effort there and awakened many to see the meaning of it all; in breaking up their homes.

There may be ideal husbands and ideal wives, but they don't always marry each other.

It's hard to be a leader in America. You can't tell which way the darned crowd's going.

There has been so much talk about economy at Washington that many seem to forget that reduction of expenses since the war is due mainly and inevitably to the fact that there are no more huge war bills to pay. The prediction of Representative Byrne that the appropriations of this Congress will run a quarter of a billion dollars over those of the last one may not be fully verified by the event but it is a prediction with plentiful basis for in the matter of the expenses of the government the inevitable tendency is toward ever increasing figures.

FARMER IS IN SERIOUS STATE

Walter Knoop Badly Injured in Unusual Accident Last Friday

The condition of Walter Knoop, 45 of Casstown, farmer, seriously injured when struck in the face by a pulley while unloading hay late Friday afternoon is reported as slightly improved today with a fair chance of recovery, according to Coleman hospital authorities at Troy, where the man was rushed following the accident.

Knoop was assisting in unloading hay at the Bert Knoop farm near Casstown when a pulley fastened to the floor of the barn broke loose under a heavy load and struck him in the face with terrific force knocking him several feet across the floor.

The terrific impact of the heavy steel pulley fractured the man's nose in several places, partially crushed the side of his face and is thought to have destroyed the sight of his eye, the member being forced from the socket. A fractured skull at first feared was not located upon examination made at the Coleman hospital by Dr. M. I. Miller of Troy. Knoop was in a semiconscious condition Saturday with occasional hemorrhages but is reported to have rested easier yesterday and last night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Fote, of Laura, spent Sunday as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Murphy.

Mrs. Lizzie Holsinger returned to her home after a pleasant visit of several months with relatives in Greenville, Lima and Dayton. Mrs. Holsinger was accompanied home by her sister, Mrs. J. A. Miller and son, Earl, of Lima, and Mrs. Sarah Henry, of Dayton, Mrs. Henry remaining for the week.

We have also reached the stage where the washerwoman is about the only person entitled to have three sheets in the wind.

Most Covington men men are just grownup babies. It only takes a minor dislocation to make them think the whole world is out of joint.

HATRED OF AMERICA

"America is not hated abroad; it is loathed," a business man returning from Continental Europe is quoted, and an American writing from England to a club man is said to have advised him not to cross the Atlantic during his vacation, for "your friends best friend here will invite you for the week-end and spend it attacking rins into you; fellow guests stop little short of insult." With a knowledge of such conditions, a speaker before the recent convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs in Philadelphia proposed "a world survey seeking to analyze the underlying causes of ill-feeling toward America and to spread the facts before the American people, to the end that the causes of this distrust and resentment may be removed." But it would appear from all the accounts that a sufficient, "survey" has already been made, and certainly "the facts" have already been "spread before the American people" to a not inconsiderable extent.

As for the removal of "the causes of distrust and resentment," that would not be easy, even if every American going to Europe were cautioned to be particularly polite and considerate and a very great effort were otherwise made. The mischief is done, and it is much easier for well-intentioned Americans to deplore it than to find a remedy. The New York Times reveals shrewd insight into the real situation when it says: "When we succeeded to the position of England as the strongest of nations, and our citizens swarmed abroad as Englishmen once did to look down upon inferior races, it was certain that we should succeed also to the odium. The world may or may not love a lover, but its hatred of a creditor is inveterate. True, we have shown wisdom in scaling down the debts. But we have not been able to scale down vituperation of our politicians. We are the world's creditor and we make a noise like one."

KITCHEN MILEAGE

In the industrious pursuit of its investigations looking toward labor-saving and efficiency, The Department of Agriculture induced an obliging woman a pedometer while at work in her kitchen and thus discovered that a housewife walks a quarter of a mile when she bakes a lemon pie. Though a good pie may be worth that much travel, the Department thinks that a housewife should not be obligated to walk that far while baking a lemon or any kind of pie, however toothsome the product may be, and therefore advises smaller kitchens with more compact arrangements. The Department estimates, in fact, that a cook who has her table, stove sink and cupboards properly placed could save as much as a mile and a half on her daily kitchen mileage, and suggests that by saving "steps" in this way she could secure leisure to expend the gain out of doors in more inspiring and health-giving surroundings.

Though all this may interest housewives, doubtless the most of them know that the more compact kitchen is not a new idea and has already entered into wide experiment. The kitchenette in the big town and city apartments is as small compact and handy as a ship's galley, if not more so. In these the cook does not travel and if she were a pedometer it would register no mileage. She merely stands and reaches for whatshe needs, her arms, not her feet, being therefor. The kitchenette serves its purpose and meets an imperative need, but the rural housewife would find it disagreeably cramped and no doubt prefer even "mileage" to enforced standing on one spot. Moreover, she would be loath to surrender her wide, roomy, sunny kitchen, which in many cases serves as a clean and attractive living room as well. The Department is likely to find that in spite of the wasted mileage, the kitchenette plan will never be generally popular in the country.

Frank S. Monnett, Democratic Candidate For Attorney General

Former Attorney General of Ohio for four years.

Special Counsel for Inter-State Commerce Commission on Standard Oil Investigation.

Special Counsel before United States Senate Committee on West Virginia Coal Strike. Senator Borah, Chairman.

For 25 years has been in much of the important litigation in Ohio, both as Attorney General of Ohio and in private practice. He has been the relentless foe of the stock jobbers and plunderers. He forced the prosecution of the officers of the Hollings Companies, exposing the Hollings system of grafting and fraud in the Shadrack and other cases at Columbus, Ohio, and helped punish the leaders in penal institutions.

He will be a fearless enforcer of abuses in the Ohio Sky Department. With his experiences there would never existed the Hollings graft, and the Cleveland Discount Company's fake sales for thirty days, which these frauds defrauded Ohio citizens out of over $91,000.00.

Seats Provided for the Tired Fisherman

In a fifth-grade geography recitation the pupils were enumerating the industries along the New England coast and also the factors which made these industries profitable in this particular region. Among those named was that of fishing. The teacher then asked whether anyone could tell why so much fishing was done here. Madge, a girl who was always ready to answer, raised her hand. She named some three or four good conditions favorable for fishing, hesitated a moment, then very seriously said, "And they have several good mountains there."

The teacher looked amazed for a few seconds, then said, "Madge, you gave several good conditions; in fact, all but the last were good, but I can't see what mountains have to do with fishing. What do you mean?"

Madge spoke right up and said, "Guess the fishermen have to have seats, don't they?" — Indianapolis News.

To Develop Vast Peat Bog

Although peat is suitable for domestic fuel it has thus far been undesirable for industrial uses, such as heating boilers and furnaces. So much moisture is absorbed in peat that pressing will not drive it on. A practical method for eliminating this water has been devised by a Canadian firm and the vast peat bog at Alfred, Ont., is about to be developed. Between two and three million tons of peat are estimated to be in the bog and the plan is to make this available to manufacturers in the area between Montreal and Winnipeg, a section devoid of coal.

Dwarfed Trees Sell High

More than three hundred dwarfed trees, some only a foot high but as perfect in detail as any monarch of the forest, recently were shown to thousands of admiring Japanese at the national bosal exhibition in Tokyo. Some were sold for $4,000 each. Evergreens are the trees usually dwarfed. They are skillfully fastened portions of water and shaped with sticks.

VAST TERRITORY IS BISHOP'S HOME

Aided Tenderfoots in Alaskan Gold Rush.

Seattle, Wash.—A vast territory towards the top of the world is "home" and "workshop" to Peter Trimble Rowe, who for thirty-one years has extended a helping hand to residents of the frozen North as missionary bishop of Alaska.

Today, at seventy years of age, the Episcopalian bishop looks forward to several more winters, extending the outposts of civilization further to the north, ministering to his flock. Then he says he will give way to a younger man imbued with ardor for a difficult mission. Bishop Rowe makes his headquarters here.

Friend of explorer, Indian and Eskimo, Bishop Rowe's life is closely interwoven with the most interesting chapters in the history of Alaska. He was on the march with the "boys" in the gold rushes of the Yukon and Dawson and admits frankly his hope that there will be one more good find of gold.

He recalls how some gazed in amazement as they rushed along the trail to Dawson. He taught many tenderfoots, many of them lured from the city, how to fashion their own boats.

Apprentice to carpentry has served the bishop many times in his varied experiences. Various missions that dot the horizon of the north country bear testimony to his handiwork. Several were fashioned by his hands. It was in one of these missions that Stefansson, the explorer, was nursed back to life after being gripped by pneumonia and typhoid fever.

Bishop Rowe is proud of his record in never losing a dog in the thousands of miles he has traveled over the broad expanse of the Alaskan territory, much of it unknown to white men. For years he has piloted his own sledge in getting from mission to mission and ministering what he calls "practical Christianity."

Turns Buddhist and Bars Meat Eaters as Tenants

New York.—The secret of the "Hermit of Stanton Street," which for six years has been locked in the four-story building at No. 89 on that thoroughfare, has just been revealed.

Sam Dooniesky, forty-two, who dwells alone there, explained that for six years, although tenants have clamored for rooms in the building, he has refused them all because they are "meat eaters."

When Dooniesky purchased the building he ordered every one out. He admitted that he had forsaken the orthodox Jewish religion to become a Buddhist, and that one of the tenets upon which his life is now based is that it is wrong to kill. The building, situated in the heart of the East side, had long provided a martyr.

Dooniesky, who sells linen, has lived a hermit's existence on the top floor, subsisting entirely on cabbage and potatoes, and poring over great tomes on science and religion. His only companion is a pet mouse. He will not keep a cat because, he said, he fears it would kill the mouse.

MYTH ABOUT GIANTS HARD TO OVERCOME

Scientific Refutation Has Been Passed Over.

For the third time within a year dispatches from northeastern Mexico record the finding of ancient bones supposed to belong to a vanished race of giants, men and women who must have stood nine or ten feet tall. A half-century ago similar reports were frequent in the eastern states, although our own discoverers were less modest than the Mexicans. Some of the giant reports from New York and New Jersey were twenty or thirty feet tall. Instead of a more plausible ten. All over the world these tales of giants exist. Nearly always they can be traced to some find of prehistoric bones. And always, when some competent scientist has made the journey to see these remarkable bones, the bones may have remained, but the giants have vanished into nothingness.

The case of the supposed giants of New York state was simple. The bones found were those of the prehistoric animals who once roamed up and down the Hudson valley. Many of them were the bones of the mastodon, a variety of elephant which was once common in North America but became extinct before the arrival of the white men. Any animal bones are so similar to the bones of the human skeleton that they are likely to deceive any one except an expert, provided, of course, that only a single bone is available for examination, not a complete skeleton.

The explanation of the Mexican stories seems to be a different one. The bones found are undeniably human. Skulls have been found with the other bones, and the human skull is unmistakable. Nevertheless, the able scientists of the Mexican department of anthropology, who examined previous finds of this kind in the region from which the new stories come, have found no evidence at all for believing in a former race of ten-foot humans. The error seems to be in estimating the height of a living person from the bones left after he dies. These bones are laid out on the ground in what are believed to be the proper positions. The spine is joined to the large bones of the hip and the leg bones are placed next to the joints which formerly connected them with these same bones. This is a natural procedure, but it is wrong. It will give a measure of height which is far too great.

In the hip bones of the hip form a horizontal girdle. The leg bones join this well above its lower surface, and the same projects down into it from the top. Thus the spine and the leg bones overlap considerably, the hip girdle holding them in their proper positions. In reconstructing the body form of a vanished race from their skeletons this overlap must be taken into account, as is done by the expert anthropologists. The inexpert are less likely to think of this or to be able to compute it accurately. Hence the idea that the bones which are found and then laid out lengthwise, without allowance for the overlap, indicates a race of extreme stature, is a little optimistic, to say the least. This was the explanation of the Mexican finds last year and is doubtless that of the new ones.

Remains of prehistoric man have now been found on every continent. Some of these remains are supposed to be nearly a million years old. Many of them are quite bestial in aspect, much more so than is true of any living race. Among all these finds of ancient humanity there is no indication that men were ever any larger, on the average, than they are today. Indeed, the average stature of modern man is greater than that of any of his predecessors. The verdict of anthropology is clear. There were no giants in those days, or ever.

Studying Favorite Foods

What is the favorite food for each section of the United States? The Department of Agriculture is going to undertake a survey in July to determine the kinds of food eaten throughout the United States, the quality and the quantities consumed in various sections. There are said to have been no adequate figures on food consumption available, and there is a demand for such information for scientific research and various other groups. It is planned to determine also whether an especially nutritive diet is within the incomes of large groups of people.

Alike Hard on Explorers

It is difficult to say whether the North or South pole is the more difficult of access, since similar conditions are to be met with in both cases. The south polar region is swept by violent and prolonged blizzards, and the oceans are difficult of access, being fringed by oceanic ice caps and protecting glaciers.
