LEAGUE ADMITS GERMANY

The League of Nations in Geneva has admitted Germany to the organization, it was announced in a statement here today.

Germany's admission follows the decision of the League Council last week to admit all countries that have fulfilled the conditions set for membership. Germany was excluded from the League when it was established in 1919 because it failed to meet those conditions.

This admission is expected to bring about a significant change in the international relations of the world, as Germany will now have an equal voice in the decision-making process of the League.

In addition to Germany, the League has also admitted several other countries, including China, the Ottoman Empire, and Switzerland, among others.

This move is seen as a step towards the eventual establishment of a world government, as the League aims to prevent future wars and promote peace and prosperity for all nations.

The admission of Germany is a significant development, as it will require the League to address the challenges and opportunities presented by the inclusion of a major power in its ranks.

In conclusion, the admission of Germany to the League of Nations is a historic moment that has the potential to shape the course of international relations for years to come.
