CAMDEN N. J., SWEEPED BY TORNADO

Detective Slater Captures Canton Gunman By a Clever Ruse

Steamer Blown Up When Gale Upsets It In Hudson River Today

Two Are Killed, and Much Damage to Property in Camden as Result of "Twister" this Morning.

(U. N. S. Dispatch)

Camden, N. J. Oct 25—A trail of ruin and wreckage was left in the demolishing buildings, uprooting trees and causing slight injuries to several persons who were showered with debris and blown off their feet.

The "twister" swept a narrow path through outlying sections and struck the residential districts, where it wreaked the heaviest damage. It lasted five minutes, appearing from the north and disappearing in a southeasterly direction.

Tarrytown, N. Y. Oct 25—Caught in the tornado gale which swept across the Tappan Zee, the freight steamer G. F. Brady capsized and sank in the Hudson river near here today with the loss of two lives.

The dead, Charles Hayes, fireman Mrs. Catherine Demond, cook.

Thomas H. Kelly, chief engineer, is in a hospital, with burns and suffering from immersion. Nine others of the crew were saved by a tug.

When the gale upset the steamer, water rushed into the boiler room, trapping Hayes as he attempted to ascend the steel ladder. The vessel was blown to bits by the force of the boiler explosion.

THIEVES TAKE $10,000 WORTH OF DIAMONDS

Toledo, O. Oct 25—A trunk containing $10,000 worth of diamonds was ransacked of its contents here early this morning by three thieves, according to the owner Jack Klovile, a diamond broker of New York City.

Klovile had checked the trunk at Buffalo yesterday for Toledo, he claims. When he called at the union station baggage room for it, he was informed that it had disappeared.

Later the management of the hotel where Klovile was stopping found the empty trunk in one of its rooms. This room had been assigned to "John Jones, Harry Carl and George Jones, of Duluth." They had fled.

Police say that the thieves had trailed Klovile and had picked up baggage checks in which the names led to give them possession of it.

Klovile, who is connected with the firm of Klovile Brothers 195 Broadway, declared the gems were insured against coal shortage.

Roofs, walls and other small iron surfaces will resist moisture and consequently rust if they are tumbled about when new and dry in a pan of powdered rosin. If slightly warmed before shaking a fine coating of rosin dust will adhere to the surface of the metal.

EVANGELIST WILL NOT APPEAR AS WITNESS

(U. N. S. Dispatch)

Los Angeles Oct 25—Aimee Semple McPherson will not appear as a witness at her own preliminary hearing on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice, it was learned today.

Although the favorable psychological effect of Mrs. McPherson's personal appearance on the stand was said to be a strong point in favor of that move, defense attorneys pointed out that the evangelist's story of her kidnapping has already been introduced into the record through the hearing by the prosecution of Mrs. McPherson's testimony before the grand jury.

To place her on the stand at this time would play her into the hands of the prosecution for a terrific cross-examination, it was pointed out.

PRESIDENT MAY REMOVE FEDERAL OFFICERS TAFT HOLDS

(U. N. S. Dispatch)

Washington, Oct 25—The power of the president to remove a federal officer without the consent of the senate was sustained by the supreme court today, thus ending a dispute as to constitutional rights that has waged between the legislative and executive branches of the government for half a century.

The decision was handed down in the case of Frank S. Myers, now deceased, former postmaster at Portland, Oregon. Myers was appointed by President Wilson in 1917 and removed from office three years later, without the consent of the senate, because his appointment had to be confirmed by the senate, his heirs contended, in a suit for back-pay, that his removal without the senate's consent was not constitutional.

Chief Justice Taft delivered the opinion.

Pat McDermott Satisfies Lodged in Jail After Three Months Search by Ora Slater who solved Miami County Mystery Murder. Expect to Learn all About Canton Affair Soon.

(U. N. S. Dispatch)

Canton, O. Oct 25—Patrick Eugene McDermott, accused as the "trigger man" in the assassination of Don R. Mellett, assassinated Canton News editor, was behind the bars of Stark county jail here today as the culmination of a search lasting more than three months.

McDermott was captured by Detective Ora Slater and County Prosecutor C. B. McClintock, of Canton, at Twin Rocks, Va. Sunday morning at the home of his brothers who surrendered him, as the result of a carefully laid trap prepared by Slater.

The "mystery man" in the Mellett case, while detectives were searching throughout the United States for him had been in hiding in an apartment in Cleveland, throughout the time since the Mellett murder.

He was lured into custody by means of a message sent to him by his brother to the effect that his aged mother who is ill, wanted to see him. That McDermott was not "in" on the plan of members of his family to "turn him up" was indicated by his greeting to the officers when they were brought into his presence at Twin Rocks. "You've double-crossed me!" shouted McDermott to his brothers.

Statements by his brothers that would furnish money to finance Pat's defense and a promise by Slater to give Pat "a square deal" were regarded as certain indications here that some sort of deal had been entered into whereby McDermott will "tell all he knows" regarding the killing of Mellett.

"There will be no hurry in arraigning Pat," McClintock said. Rudner, in Stark county jail with McDermott, was hopeful today after he had learned of Pat's apprehension. Jailers said he was more cheerful than at any time since his arrest, several weeks ago.

When Pat talks, Rudner said, "Stark county will lose another border."

McDermott, who entered the jail last night almost in a state of collapse, relaxed during the night and was in fine spirits this morning. For the first time in three months, he slept with the knowledge that he was free from his pursuers—both officers of the law and members of the vice ring who might be interested in putting him out of the way.

He is alone on the second floor of the jail the other prisoners in this section having been transferred to the first floor. He has a large light cell with a comfortable cot plenty of blankets a table chair and wash stand.

When the jailer called him for breakfast this morning there was no response. Three calls went unanswered, with some alarm for the safety of the prisoner the jailer unlocked the outer door and went in and rattled the door to his cell. Finally there was a stir from under the blankets and Pat turned a sleepy face toward the door.

Then he smiled broadly. "I'm feeling better than I have been in a long time," he said in response to the jailer's query.

He arose and dressed and ate his breakfast with evidence of a hearty appetite.

Then he cleaned up his cell, made the bed and sat down to wait for the session with Prosecutor McClintock.

DR. MCCHESEY SPEAKS

Dr. McChesey, President of Cedarville College, had charge of the services, yesterday, at the Presbyterian Church, giving two excellent sermons. In his evening address, he especially emphasized the preminence of Jesus Christ through the Scripture and in all creation, and the preminence of Christ as Head of the Church.

He spoke of Christ's own claim to deity, "Before Abraham was, I am" and in all the wonders of the created earth and heavens, it was He who planned it all. He became also the Head of the new Creation, the Church making it a glorious Church, without blame before him.

Dr. McChesey insisted that for this Church there was one purpose and that its unity, with "one body, one Spirit even as ye are called in one hope of our calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

There was after all one creed that had been acknowledged by the one Church, that the apostles' and although we see a confusion of two hundred sects among Catholics and Protestants which is to be lamented, yet all would some day be gathered into the one body, with Christ worshiped as its crucified, risen and glorified Lord.

He spoke of the necessity of a creed, that it was impossible to "live what was not first believed. To say that it matters not what one believes just so there is a good life, is all wrong. There could not be even the picking up of a pin until it was before the mind of the one who performs the action. Therefore, many are mistaken in their beliefs, insisting that it was first necessary to obey the Scripture command, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." The time would come when Jew and Gentile would be united in this one belief and honor the God of the Bible. He spoke of the great Queen Victoria, who humbly acknowledged to the question of the "black Prince", that the greatness of her own land was only in as far as they had honored the Bible, which she brought forward and handed to him. So, said Dr. McChesey, the greatness of earth is yet to come, when all shall acknowledge the God of the one book, the Bible.

Can Get Along With

Eight Hundred Words

The average man is adequately equipped for communicating with his fellows with a vocabulary of only 800 words. This is according to Dr. Frank B. Vizetelly, who, as lexicographer and editor of the New Standard dictionary, has come in contact with 515,000 English words, as reported in an article by Angus McNeill in Liberty.

"In its first year," says Doctor Vizetelly, describing the way in which words are learned, "a child acquires a vocabulary of ten to twenty mispronunciations, which, however, mean something to both child and mother. During its second year this total will increase to 300 or 400 words, depending on how often the family is at the end of the third year the infant will know 800 words. These will last him a lifetime if they must. Of course he will increase his vocabulary as his interests and activities expand, but the 800 will serve him, even if he never learns another word."

The average fairly educated human being, Doctor Vizetelly points out, however, knows from 10,000 to 20,000 words, with a great reserve of words that are comprehensible only to those in similar lines of interest and endeavor.

Youthful Rider in Luck

A pony ridden by Ray Shof, thirteen, was killed by electricity at New Castle, Pa., but the boy escaped injury. As he rode by a pole, the youngster says, his pony fell and he jumped off. He went to get help, thinking that the pony had tripped, but the men who went to assist found that the body of the pony was charged with electricity. It is believed that the saddle and the boy's rubber-soled shoes acted as insulators and saved him from death.

Gophers Fooled Him

When Seth VanFatten of Van Natta, Calif., found that the gophers were eating up some of his prize vegetables, he dug a big hole in the middle of the garden and lit a small can of sulphur. When he came back to see how many were dead he found that the gophers had not only put out the sulphur blaze with soft dirt but had plugged up all holes leading from it to their subterranean chambers.

He came to Covington, September 15th 1917, from Louisville, Ind., and has served in various capacities with the company for the past 20 years.

Mr. B. H. Hayes ticket agent at Dublin, Ind., has been promoted to Covington and will take up his new duties here November 1st.

TRACTION LINE MAY CONTINUE TO OPERATE

Charles Eliff, member of the firm of Murphy Eliff, Leen and Murphy, attorneys representing the receivers of the D. C. and P. Traction, in a statement made public Saturday said that one man cars will probably be put in operation on the line, if the receivers accept a price to be offered by a syndicate represented by Victor K. Spohn, assistant-purchasing agent of the Western Ohio Traction.

The offer is to be made in a few days and if acceptable the sale will be closed this week.

SIX DEAD IN HOME AT MARION, ILLINOIS

Graced Father Says Five Members of Family then Suicide.

Marion, Ill., Oct. 25—The home of W. O. Potter, until two days ago the dwelling of a happy, care-free family was today a veritable morgue. Six caskets containing the bodies of six members of the Potter family lined the drawing room, side by side.

Five of the family had been murdered by the head of the house, who then committed suicide. He was W. O. Potter, former United States district attorney and one of the most prominent citizens in Central Illinois.

A sudden fit of insanity, probably caused by worry over financial matters, a coroner's jury found, was the cause of the tragedy. Only two members of the family, who happened to be away from home at the time, remain alive.

Those killed were Potter's wife, two daughters and two grand daughters and two grand daughters. One daughter was Mrs. Gilbert Potter White, wife of Dr. Gilbert White of Miami, Fla. She and her two baby daughters, both of whom were slain, were visiting the Potters.

After crushing in the heads of the victims with a piece of iron, Potter went to the rear of the house and drowned himself in a cistern. The tragedy is believed to have occurred about midnight Saturday. Morris Potter, 26, a son found the bodies when he returned home from a trip early yesterday. The victims, apparently, were slain as they slept.

A Point of Ethics

The modern funeral director is not primarily a merchant, as was his predecessor. The funeral director of today is a professional man, with a most strict code of ethics.

One of the points of our code of ethics upon which we lay great stress is that all who call upon us, regardless of station, shall be served with equal care and consideration.

A Wet Ordination

In 1785 the ordination of a minister in the town of Beverly, Mass., was a dry affair, judging from these words in an old bill of expenses: "Thirty bowls of punch before going to church; ten bottles of wine, before ascending the pulpit; forty-four bowls of punch; twenty-eight bottles of wine, eight bowls of brandy and some cherry rum, while at dinner." And six persons drank tea.

ARGON GAS STORED IN ALL ORGANISMS

Electric-light bulbs are not the only thing that contains argon. This supposedly rare and inert element has lately been discovered in the cells of a number of organisms, and is presumably present in the cells of all living things, says a Science Service bulletin.

A French scientist, A. Pictet, reported recently before the Paris Academy of Sciences that he and two associates had extracted a little less than a third of a cubic centimeter of the gas from a gram of dried yeast and that they had later found it also in sheep's brains and in the blood of man. They explain its presence on the hypothesis that the gas, being exceedingly inactive chemically, slowly accumulates in the cells as it is carried there, and has no means of elimination because it does not combine with other elements. It thus remains stored in the cells until their death and disintegration.

Atta Boy

Bill Stahl, editor of the Hoosier Farmer, is responsible for this one: A few days ago Bill said he was descending in an elevator, filled with men, in the Lincoln hotel, when a woman with a small boy entered from one of the midway floors. Immediately all of the men doffed their hats, and the youngster looked around in amazement. As the lobby was reached, the boy could restrain himself no longer.

THE CARE AND PROPER USE OF FINE LINENS

By VYVIAN DELAFIELD

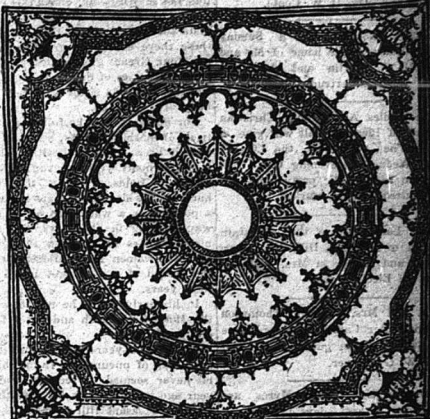

ARTICLE XII

Laundering Fine Linens

MANY linen damasks are ruined by the laundries, where they are boiled and washed in bleaching mixtures with other fabrics of household use which require much more washing to cleanse and bring to the proper color. This kind of laundering will kill the lower in your cloth and bring it back to you a dead snowy white with much of its strength lost. Flax is a cellulosic fiber, and be done when the cloth is still quite moist and with an iron which is not too hot.

The question of monogramming linens is a debatable improvement, especially on your table cloth. A large monogram is shown on the surface of the table. It is very liable to "break up" the flat surface and in many cases unbalances the design of the cloth. It is also impossible for the laundress to iron the cloth around and between the letters on the monogram, which also takes away from the general appearance. If the monogram is on the "hang over" at the corner it is rarely seen, and last, but not least,

"Chippendale," a linen damask design for use on formal occasions as such, it does not require nearly as severe a wash as cotton.

There is no particular problem in laundering linens, as dirt does not stick to it as tenaciously as to the case in other textiles. But the greatest care is necessary in the ironing. This is because of the long nature of linen fibers, and if there is too much starch used there is a chance that these fibers will break under the influence of an iron which is too heavy. In ironing, the right side should be pressed first and then the wrong side, and in order to obtain the highest possible luster you should iron from selvage to selvage. Ironing should monogramming adds very considerably to the cost of your linen. Would it not be better to use this extra cost in buying a better grade? Sometimes monograms are used for identification in laundry. This can be overcome by working initials simply and in small size in the corner of the cloth and thus prevent the laundry putting on their laundry mark.

As mentioned before, a good linen properly laundered will improve in beauty with use. This is probably the cause of many people thinking linens today are not as good, or as well made as they were in the days of our ancestors.

which may prove an eventful episode in the case.

Don R. Melett, 32, was shot on the morning of July 16, by gunmen, as he was putting his automobile in his garage at his home in Canton. During the two years he had been publisher of the Canton News, he had waged an unrelenting campaign against the operations of an alleged vice ring in the city and had been several times threatened by denizens of the "jungle," the underworld district.

Held in absolute incommunications, with strict orders that no one but Slater and McClintock be permitted to speak to him, McDermott was undecided late this afternoon whether he would make a full confession.

Cops to Carry Cameras

Cincinnati policemen will be equipped with cameras in addition to night sticks. It is thought that cameras will provide a useful adjunct in accident cases, as the officer will be able to take a picture of the actual accident and many disputes by witnesses will be avoided.

(L. S. Discher)

Los Angeles, Oct. 25—A parade of defense witnesses was scheduled to begin this morning as the Albee Sample McPherson conspiracy case got under way.

An early end to the preliminary hearing of Mrs. McPherson, her mother Mrs. Hinnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Sellaff was not expected after defense attorneys announced that some 40 witnesses would be placed on the stand before the hearing closed.

The state is attempting to prove that the woman evangelist had never been kidnapped, as the claims, but had spent at least part of the time she was missing with her former radio operator, Kenneth G. Ormiston. Mrs. Sellaff, a co-defendant, alleges Mrs. McPherson offered her money to find a woman who would pose as Ormiston's companion at a Carmel cottage.

While the defense was gathering its witnesses, a new "mystery" letter was received by Deputy District Attorney Dennison. The letter took exception to the way Dennison was prosecuting Mrs. McPherson and her mother.

A similarity between the hand-writing in this letter and the writing in the missing $50,000 McPherson ransom led officers of the district attorney's office to begin an immediate search for the writer.

Scientific Runner

The phantom runner in "good luck" a track coach would say. He runs with his head extended downward to lessen air resistance, with the long tail carried straight behind like a rudder, and throws his feet forward with every step, reaching far distance, as does the trained athlete of the club path. But at trying he is only mediocre.—Detroit News.

Obituary

Charles C. Morris

On the twenty-third of June, 1848, at humble home in Fairfield County, Ohio, there was much rejoicing over a new born son, who came to cheer the hearts of John and Drusilla Morris. This tiny tot was the subject of our sketch, who has come to the end of his earthly pilgrimage, at the age of 78 years, 3 months and 18 days.

On November 17th, almost 56 years ago, he was united in marriage to Fanny Parry who remains to mourn with us. To this union seven children were given, four sons and one daughter have preceded the father in death and one son Harry of Dayton, three daughters Mary Miller, of Dayton, Jessie Veetoven, of Kansas City and Clara Yeers of Pleasant Hill remain to comfort the mother. Beside these there are seven grandchildren and four Great grandchildren, two brothers, James of Sandusky, John of Chicago and one sister Winnie of Sandusky of N. D. Ridge.

For many years he followed the trade of marble polisher, but relinquished it because of his health. He followed many years of rugged life in the oil fields. Finding this too hard for his declining years he took position as a watchman on a railway crossing in St. Marys, and for nineteen years he guarded the lives of men, women and children, with the record of no accident in all of these years.

In his early youth he united with the Methodist church and never forgot its teachings.

Almost two years ago he suffered an attack of pneumonia, from which he never seemed to recover, and a year ago together with his wife they came to Pleasant Hill to make their home with their daughter Clara. In April of this year he took his bed and has gradually lost in the battle for life against all that loving hands and hearts could do.

On Thursday morning near eight o'clock, God heard his pleading to go home and gently as is asleep his spirit fled.

Ah Christ do thou within me speak

For thou canst comfort best

The tower and stronghold of the weak

The weary wanderers rest.

Our shadow in the noon day hours

And when the tempest round us lowers

Our shelter safe and blest.

Funeral services were held from the home Sunday at 11:30, conducted by H. C. Marlin and Interment, was made in Green Lawn Cemetery near Elida, Ohio in charge of Siford and Son of Wapakoneta.

The family wishes to thank neighbors and friends for their sympathy and help during the sickness and death of the father, and also for the beautiful floral tributes.

Her Four Hundred Cakes

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

SOMETIMES one of the married men at his office asked Tom Bollinger home for dinner and the other, his brother, an agreeable partner at bridge for an unmarried sister at the Brooks' and served as extra bachelor when the Drows gave a party. The very popular Mabel Gregory would sometimes telephone to him at four or five in the afternoon begging him to "come around" for the evening. But whatever happened Tom would while away an evening after dinner with Ruth Harrow. He never made arrangements to go to see Ruth until late afternoon.

Then one day when no plans had presented themselves for the evening Tom telephoned to Ruth and Ruth said, "I'm sorry, Tom, but it won't be quite convenient tonight. Can't you come tomorrow evening instead?" But Tom had promised to go to the Brooks' that evening. Ruth suggested the following evening, but Tom hesitated. Something might turn up for that evening.

"Oh, well," he said, "never mind. I wanted to see you tonight. But if some one else is going to be calling—never mind. I'll call you up sometime the first of the week."

"Now, Tom," Ruth said coaxingly. "If you are going to be cross about it, I'll tell you. I've promised to make cakes—two dozen of them—for a cake sale tomorrow afternoon. You know I don't get much of time with the office until after six and the only time I can make them is after dinner. It's a sale at the parish house."

Monday of the next week found Tom late in the afternoon with the prospect of a dull and lonely evening and so he telephoned to Ruth.

"I'm so sorry," said Ruth with emphasis on the "so," "but I'm going to be very busy. I just can't manage." And again Ruth suggested that they arrange for some night later that week, but again Tom, unused to making plans ahead of time with Ruth, said he'd call up later.

Five or six times within the next week or two Tom telephoned to Ruth, but every time Ruth pleaded full plans for evening. And never did Tom arrange his plans ahead of time. Then one Friday afternoon at half past four—when there was still a chance of something "breaking" for the evening—Tom telephoned Ruth at her office.

"I'm coming to see you this evening," he announced.

"Oh, Tom," Ruth began to exclaim, "I'm so sorry. I'm very busy—I'm planning to make four dozen cakes. They are having a sale for the orphan asylum."

"I'm coming anyway," said Tom. "I can see you a few minutes, can't I?" "Why?" Ruth faltered. "Come if you like. Only I shall be very busy, and I may make you beat eggs and cream, butter and sugar."

At nine that evening Tom Bollinger was meekly sitting in the kitchen of Ruth Harrow's old-fashioned suburban home. He had proved his inefficiency as an egg beater.

"I'll tell you what you might do," Ruth said, looking at him very sweetly as she opened the oven to get a peep at the golden morsels, "you might begin washing the dishes. Bridget insists on having everything washed up."

So for a half-hour he labored washing mixing bowls, spoons, graters, all stuck up with chocolate or coconut, tins and egg-beaters, while Ruth, who looked tantalizingly lovely as she iced the fragrant cakes, pressed him.

Finally the task was over and the kitchen, left in perfect order. But it was almost eleven o'clock. Tom's mouth had watered for just one of the little cakes, but Ruth had explained that she had promised four dozen and the time was just that number.

"Well, if I can't have a cake, I can at least have a kiss," said Tom. Ruth protested and Tom did not insist. He said he could not stay later but sat down with Ruth on an uninviting wooden seat in the hall for a minute or two before going.

"I'm jealous, Ruth," he told her. "You've put me off for two weeks. There's some one else."

Then Ruth told him that every night she had put him off she had really been busy making cakes for sales and banquets. Finally she seemed to impose on her because that good natured about it. She had four hundred in two weeks—some for practically every charity in the place.

"Next time I ask if I can come up and you have kisses to make let me order some cake. The Exchange. I know they have 'em there," Tom suggested. Ruth told him that they were very expensive—a dollar a dozen. But Tom laughed and said he'd pay five dollars a dozen for the sake of having Ruth to himself.

"But I didn't know you cared about me," ventured Ruth.

"I didn't know I did either," said Tom in confusion. "At least not so much. But I've found out I do. What do you say to going to dinner and the theater tomorrow night? The Drows may ask me out there but this will be a previous engagement, and let's plan something for Saturday afternoon and evening. Mabel Gregory wanted me to join a house party this weekend, but I haven't promised."

"And there sitting uncomfortably on the hard old wooden settee in the old-fashioned hall Tom Bollinger proposed to Ruth Harrow and was accepted."

MANY LIVES LOST IN ARMENIAN QUAKE

Constantinople Oct. 25—Twenty Armenian villages, in addition to Leninakan and Erivan, were damaged by the earthquake which visited Armenia on Saturday, according to the latest information available today. This information, however, still was incomplete. The exact number of casualties still was unknown.

At least 50,000 are reported homeless in Armenia and search of the ruins in four cities in hourly increasing the list of dead, which is now estimated in excess of three hundred.

Some reports state that virtually every building, within a radius of one hundred miles of Leninagan has been ruined.

Many persons are believed to have been buried alive when they rushed into the streets after the first earthquake, only to be crushed beneath the debris of houses which were toppled over by a second shock.

The soviet government has created a special relief commission and has appropriated $20,000 for relief work. Special relief trains and all available physicians have been rushed to the stricken country.

22 LOST WHERE SHIP TURNS TURTLE

Hamilton Bermuda, Oct. 25—Reports of heavy loss of life in the hurricane which swept the Bermuda coast Friday were confirmed today. It is believed that a total of 22 lives were lost in the sinking of H. H. B. Valerian, a sloop which foundered during the storm, only 19 members of her crew of 108 being rescued.

The British vessel Batway turned turtle during the storm and 12 of her crew are reported to have been lost.

Many other vessel were endangered during the storm when they broke loose from their moorings and were tossed about the harbor. The warship Calcutta narrowly escaped serious damage.

Hotels and office buildings, as well as residences, suffered considerable damage.

Bull's "Rights" Upheld

A plea of self-defense made in behalf of a bull which engaged in combat with a man was upheld by a jury in a Kentucky court. The defense was that the bull was merely protecting itself when it knocked the plaintiff down, loosening his teeth and breaking four ribs, says the Dearborn Independent.

No Tobacco Substitute

There is no dried weed, leaf or herb that can be smoked that will take the place of tobacco in any sense. It is possible to smoke any of the woods or plants, but they will not have the flavor as strong as tobacco.
