Another mystery in the series of unexplained murders which has caused such terror in the cities of the Midwest, as well as in the towns and villages of the country, has been added to the list. The body of a young woman was found on the outskirts of the city, and the police have taken a number of persons into custody in connection with the crime.

The body was discovered by a farmer who was plowing his field. The farmer, who is well known to the police, stated that he had noticed several strange men in the neighborhood, and that he had seen one of them carrying a heavy bag. The farmer also stated that he had heard a noise in the woods, and that he had seen a man running away from the scene of the crime.

The police have been unable to identify the victim, but they believe that she was a young woman from one of the surrounding towns. The body was found in a deserted house, and the police are looking for witnesses who may have seen anything.

Several persons have been arrested, but the police have not yet been able to make any positive identification. The case is still under investigation, and the police are working on the theory that the victim was murdered by a man who was familiar with the area.

The police are asking for the public's assistance in identifying the victim, and they are urging anyone who may have seen anything to come forward. The police believe that the case is of great importance, and they are determined to bring the criminal to justice.

RAYMOND joined his head out of the window of the old 16-cell, and peered intently. A small boy climbed a fence and leaned sidewise into the old cell. "Somebody throw that, please!" he shouted.

The boy's tone was friendly, and he added, "Hi, old man!" RAYMOND nodded recognizably, his eyes fixed on the boy's face. "Hi, kid," he said, "did you see the game tonight?"

The boy, who was about 15 years old, looked up at RAYMOND's face. "Yeah," he said, "it was a good game. Did you see the way they handled the pitcher?"

RAYMOND nodded, his eyes still focused on the boy's face. "Yeah," he said, "I saw that pitcher. He had a great fastball."

The boy smiled, his eyes shining with excitement. "Yeah," he said, "he really did. I heard he's going to be a star in the future."

RAYMOND nodded again, his eyes still fixed on the boy's face. "Yeah," he said, "I heard that too. He's got a lot of potential."

Dad Knows Everything
In the buying of Christmas presents it is often heard saying that there are some persons who know more about the man than his wife. This is probably true when you buy for others, but one can always depend on his wife to have the inside knowledge, that after all she has bought for him. This actually applies to all who buy for others.

PAWLOO PLANT DISEASE

Many diseases which afflicts plants, such as rust, blight and other destructive pests, are injurious to the lawn or garden. There are several methods of arresting the ravages of these diseases, but the application of a fungicide is the simplest and most effective method of control. Fungicides are a class of chemicals which kill or retard the growth of fungi. They may be applied as sprays, dusts, or granules. The exact method of application will depend on the type of fungicide and the specific disease being treated.
