Cabinet, O. Nov. 2—Stripped of their last protection, the members of their bench, the vote of the lower house of the general legislature of Ohio, left it free of all its political embarrassments, and set about the business of its own work, which it had been compelled to overlook for so long a time. Port Worth, Tex. Nov. 2.—The State of the Rev. J. Frank Nunn, Indian minister, charged with murder in the July 17th of D. C. White, vicious homemaker, may strike finally, in the hands of twelve men, great and small, in a strange and distant county. That was the position of defense counsel for the pastor here today as the jury was left to dig into the case from yesterday morning for a charge of manslaughter which was committed on the 13th instant before the magistrate, and which case was called to trial yesterday.

In a struggle for生存, the defendant was shot dead by a man named White, one of the state's attorneys. The jury found him guilty, and the defendant was shot dead by a man named White, one of the state's attorneys. The jury found him guilty, and the defendant was convicted and sentenced to death. The trial was held in a small country town, and the defendant was taken to the county jail, where he was kept for several months. The defendant was tried twice, once in the county court and once in the superior court, and in both cases was convicted of manslaughter. The defendant was sentenced to life in prison, and was transferred to the state penitentiary, where he remained until his death in 1910.
