Columbus, 0 Jan, 5—Efforts to solve the financial troubles of the Buckeye state government failed today to get into the activities of the 87th regular legislative session. The session, which convened here today, was dominated by the question of the governor's recommendations for selection of the state utility commission is scheduled as an added feature of the legislation.

Besides giving consideration to legislation dealing with local issues, there are many other acts of the legislature that were not yet enacted. One of the most important of these is the state's state tax laws.

As has been the case in a number of sessions, the new legislation overwhelmingly Republican, with the Republicans holding a clear majority in the Senate and 35 in the House.

Although the prevailing sentiment among the legislators is that there will be a short, simple, legislative session, there are indications that the legislation may be long and complicated. The joint legislative committees on taxation, highways, and elections, which are the last regular legislative session, gave extended and comprehensive consideration to the major policy items relating to those phases of state government.

The main thrust of the session is the need for more direct control over the state's revenue funds. In recent years, this fund in the state treasury, was completed.

Finally, the session is expected to bring about the prevention of the state's funds being plunged into industrial operation. This is the main goal of the current administration. The governor and the legislators are expected to introduce a new state tax program for revision of taxes, which will provide for increased revenues and for economic development of the state's industries.

Both administration and anti-ad

The state will have a deficit of approximately $15,000,000 below the state's budgetary level. The state's revenue funds are expected to be used to cover the deficit and to avoid the possibility of a financial crisis.

The session is expected to be long and complex, with the state's budget to be revised and the legislation to be completed.

The selection of the state utility commission is scheduled as an added feature of the legislation.
