Obituary

LYDIA A. BANKS

Lydia A. Banks, who was the daughter of Andrew and Phoebe McMillen, and the widow of David B. Banks, died Dec. 31, 1925 at the home at Ovington where she had been a patient for about six weeks. She was born at Willow Grove, Perry Co., Jan. 27, 1846. She was removed to Troy, Ohio in 1854 with her parents, and in 1855 came to Ovington. In September 1859 she was married to Simon Landry of Troy, Ohio. They lived happily together for fifty years. Mr. Landry died in 1899. To them was born two sons, Howard who died in 1906.

In 1918 she was again married by marrying the wife of David Bankin who resided in that city in 1922. She greatly enjoyed telling of early pioneer days and of her experiences in the Civil War. She also delighted in her religion, she was a member of the Baptist church until she came to the Ovington to live when she united with the Christian Church. At the last her religion was a great comfort to her and she frequently expressed desire to be taken home. For a few years now she has talked much of the future and looked forward to the life after. She was a family of five children and for some time the only one left of the surviving members of that family and she felt very lonely the loneliness being the only one left. In her last days she was attended by her clergy and she gave the service very well. She was a quiet woman and has many relatives and friends who knew and loved much Lydia as she was familiarly called.

JFK Assassination

On November 22, 1963, President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Texas. The shooting occurred on a rainy afternoon as the President was riding in an open car with his wife, Jacqueline Kennedy. The parade was part of the inaugural parade for the new President. The assassination shocked the nation and led to a massive investigation to determine the cause of the shooting. The investigation, known as the Warren Commission, was unable to determine the exact cause of the shooting. The assassination remains one of the most famous and controversial events in American history.
