ANCIENT TOMB NEAR ALGIERS AWES ARAB

Antedates Christianity by at Least Two Centuries.

Paris.—A mysterious tomb regarded with much awe by the local Arabs and French in an area of the desert region, stands on the crest of a lofty cliff, which is inaccessible to all save from below. It is known as Le Tombeau de la Cheveaux, the tomb of the Cherubim of the Christian world, although French scholars rest on no evidence to support this view. As a structure it resembles the Christian crypts throughout the centuries. The structure is about 100 feet in length, and its interior, which resembles the cross, is of rectangular form
