BIGAMIST AND MURDERER TELLS HIS LIFE STORY

By WILLIAM N. COFFEY Copyright 1927 by I. N. S.

With good behavior, I was released from the penitentiary in February, 1920. I soon discovered what it means to be an ex-convict. I found wherever I went I was a marked man.

Then began an orgy of bitter retaliation upon my part against work-manking.

The doors of the churches were open to me. I traveled through the whole of the middle West, collecting funds. The money? The association was easy! There were months when I collected as much as $20,000.

Then began an orgy of bitter retaliation upon my part against work-manking.

The doors of the churches were open to me. I traveled through the whole of the middle West, collecting funds.

There was a matronly little woman in a small town in Iowa. She gave me her life savings to "invest" for her—and never uttered a peep when I told her, later, that the investment had been "unfortunate."

There was a waitress in Nebraska. She didn't have much money—but what she had she gave to me.

Middle-aged women were the easiest—I was young, not unhand-some.

Their husbands—if they were not widows—were stogy, unromantic business men or farmers.

I remember one old banker's wife who simpered like a school girl of sixteen when I told her how "naturally beautiful" she was.

Easy! So easy! And the best part of it all was that I was an honored guest—A representative of the association, welcomed into their churches, their minister's studies, their homes and their club meetings.

With it all, you would think, I suppose, I should have known better than to make the mistake that I was to make in a short time later.

I quit the association, finally, to take an advertising job. I went to my new position highly recommended.

I visited me yesterday," she wrote. "She is a very beautiful young woman, you will remember her. She asked after you—seemed very much interested. I think she likes you a great deal."

I went back home, saw "X"—and married her. Why? I don't know. I thought I was in love with her.

There are three children back home—two boys and a girl.

I lost my job when the company learned that I was an ex-convict. My wife was horror-stricken. Again I tramped the streets in search of work.

Broke, disgusted with living, I took to house-to-house canvassing for a time. Then I went back into the employ of the association.

It was while I was making a trip for the association that I first met Mattie Sherman Halea.

News Flashes

(L. N. S. Dispatch)

By LUTHER A. HUSTON

Tokio, Feb. 7.—With more than 1,000 priests and ritualists participating in the ceremonies, Yoshihito, late emperor of Japan, who died Christmas morning, was buried tonight with the most impressive and resplendent ceremonies the empire of the Rising Sun has been seen in nearly two decades.

Within the glow of thousands of lanterns and torches the ceremonies began at 6 p. m. (4 a. m. New York time), when the funeral procession left the palace in the heart of Tokio. They will end at dawn tomorrow at Higashi-Asakawa, a country village on the Musashi Plain, about 30 miles from Tokio, when the mortal remains of the once hundred and twenty-third occupant of the world's most ancient throne, will be laid to rest in the Mausoleum especially built to receive it.

In the vanguard of the procession as it left the imperial palace were the usual representatives of the army, navy and court. But the wailing crowd paid little heed to these. They were awaiting the hearse a picturesque and huge cart which bore the coffin.

This cart was chiefly of Hinoki, or Japanese cypress, with wheels of Zelkova and axles of oak. It was lacquered black, trimmed with gold. Its length was 23 feet and it was 12 feet high and 12 feet wide with wheels nearly six feet in diameter.

Three jet black oxen drew the court and a fourth bullock held in reserve, paced sedately behind even ready to take his place between the shafts should one of his brothers falter. These bullocks were bedecked in regalia almost as elaborate as that worn by the human mourners. Nine herdsmen or grooms attended them, two for each oxen, with a head groomman to supervise.

As the bullocks trudged along, as many steps each minute, the wheels of the cart gave forth a peculiar wailing note denoting grief to the Japanese mind. This was in accordance with an ancient Japanese custom, which requires that the wheels of the coffins of the deceased shall "mourn." It requires much skill in building the cart to produce these strange wailing notes at regular intervals.

Behind the cart walked the chief mourner. Theoretically this was the present emperor, the son of the dead. But in accordance with custom, the emperor did not walk in the procession but delegates this duty to another member of the imperial family, Prince Chichibu.

Almost every personage in Japan except those too old or too infirm to walk, was in the mournful though generally dodecked procession that followed. The army's guard of honor, escorting the coffin, consisted of 3,300 men selected from the imperial guard division—the old guard of the Japanese army. The navy provided an honor guard of 4,000 blue jackets. The colors of every regiment of the Japanese army—77 in all—were carried in the procession by picked representatives of those regiments.

Along the route of the procession soldiers and sailors lined the left side of the street while the public occupied the right. More than 9,000 police lined the street.

After the formal funeral ceremonies conducted in accordance with the Shinto rite, the body was conveyed from the pavilion to a specially built railway station at Sendagaya on the outskirts of Tokio and not far from the Shinjuku gardens. Here it was placed aboard the funeral train and just at midnight the emperor, who had ruled over his country for 15 years, began his last journey from the capital.

Four trains comprised the railway caravan. Two trains running before the hearse carried various high dignitaries and officials whose presence was necessary at the mausoleum before the body arrived.

The funeral train proper conveyed besides the body of the emperor, the chief mourners and members of the imperial family as well as court officials.

The fourth and last train was given over to cabinet officers, various government employees and lesser officials.

As the trains passed through Hachioji, about 20 miles from Tokio, a salute of 101 guns was fired by an artillery battery as the army's final salute to the late emperor's spirit.

There is still a moment or two of romance lingering in the Muskingum Valley, for how else can you account for a sixteen year old couple going honeymooning down along the Ohio river?

To Kill Cockroaches

Cockroaches may be exterminated by sprinkling sodium fluoride where they hide. Another method is to put dabs of phosphorus paste inside of small tufts of paper. This method keeps the poison away from children or household pets.

Cranberry Muffins

Try Cranberries in muffins. Use a cupful in a recipe calling for 2 cups of flour and 1 egg. The cranberries should be rolled in two tablespoons of sugar and folded carefully into a batter made of the following ingredients: 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-8 cup of melted butter, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg. Mix by the muffin method, that is beat the egg lightly, add the milk. Sift the dry ingredients, add the milk and egg mixture and melted butter, and finally the cranberries, rolled in sugar. Bake about 20 minutes in a moderate oven. This makes about 12 muffins.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

GETTYSBURG FALLS BEFORE COVINGTON'S ATTACK

One of the fastest games of the season was played here Friday night when the speedy Gettysburg quintet was defeated by our fighting five.

Although Covington had suffered defeat in a previous game with Gettysburg they were outclassed entirely by Covington's team. Covington led in scoring during the first half and at the end of the half the score was 14 to 8 in our favor. The first half showed the supremacy of the Covington team and the visitors were unable to break through our defense at all. During the third quarter the fighting spirit of the Gettysburg team became aroused and they piled up 10 points to their credit making the score 18 to 14 in their favor. About this time a controversy over the ball hitting the grofers gave our team time to wake up and get to work. As soon as the 4th quarter started the score was tied 18 to 18 and the game seemed on ice. The irrestiable March of the (oving chuked and the score climbed steadily McCracken dropping in two at a vital moment. The Gettysburg defense would not hold any longer and the score at the end of the game was 24 to 18 in favor of Covington.

This game showed that Covington still has a team that is capable of holding its own. This game makes Covington 9 victories and 3 defeats, which is a good record for a Class B school.

Smith and Deal both played a fine game each getting their share of the profits.

McCracken is also to be commended for his shooting as he really uro't the team out of the hole.

Wilson and Welkert did fine work as guards shutting out the visitors in numerous incidents.

The line up was as follows:
COVINGTON GETTYSBURG
 R. F. Smith 10 Sells 8
 L. F. McCracken 3 Martingale 3
 C. Deal 8 Sentmas 2
 R. G. Welkert Westfall 1
 L. G. Wilson Martin 4
 Retterbush refereed both boys and girls game.

Lima—Kerosene early today added four more victims to its toll in the deaths of Mrs. Charles Reese and her three children. The mother, it was reported, was kindling a fire with kerosene, at their farm home near Neemore, 12 miles west of here.

Columbus—Unmasked bandits today held up three chain store managers and a filling station agent in broad daylight and escaped with approximately $300. One of the men police were told, wore rim shell glasses and had a "funny nose".

Dayton, O.—Whether a concern which rents an automobile without a driver to a patron is liable for fines imposed when the temporary operator of the car violates traffic ordinances is the question involved in an appeal on file in common pleas court here today.

A auto rental concern let out a car, and the driver violated the city ordinance limiting parking in certain territory to one hour. The fine of $5 was imposed by the municipal court upon the owner of the car, and the appeal was taken.

Late News Flashes

(L. N. S. Dispatch)

Cleveland, O.—An air patrol of the Great Lakes to guard against rum running from the Canadian side may be established next summer, according to reports reaching the federal prohibition office here from Washington.

The plans are as yet merely tentative, but it is known that the government will make a determined effort to stop liquor smuggling when lake traffic is opened next spring. The air patrol may play a part.

Last summer much contraband liquor was successfully landed across lake Erie and landed at points east of Cleveland. Large boats, loaded with booze would put out from the other side, but remain in Canadian water. Small speed boats, hovering about the larger craft would await an opportunity and usually under the cover of night make a dash across the lake with small cargoes.

Scouting airplanes, it is believed, could detect these runs, and tip off government agents in speed boats and automobiles on the American side. The planes could not, of course, make many captures themselves.

Airplanes would do no good. What we need is several more good, fast speed boats. By the time an aviator made his report, even granting that his plane was well enough equipped with search lights to spot the rum runner, the booze would be landed and delivered. They might equip this air patrol with machine guns and bombs and kill the smugglers. But until the government decides to go that far I can't see much use for it.

Delaware O.—Cuss the present generation of newswriters if you like and cursed letters to the editor, but don't forget there's a new generation coming up and its promise precedes it.

A class in newswriting at Ohio Wesleyan was stumped in an examination which asked among other things the following:

Who what when and where Diaz, Kwantung, Kellogg, Times, Picayune, Dan Moody, Premier Bruce, Charles Darwin, Asturias, Phillip Gibbs, Hubert Work, W. F. McDowell, Rabies, Carmel by the Sea, and Catalina.

Some of the answers were supposed to reveal the student's newspaper knowledge were:

Dan Moody, newly installed governor of Texas, was considered a figure in baseball. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior was commonly thought to be an expert on bridge. W. F. McDowell, bishop of the Methodist church, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan and trustee of the institution was identified by one student as the slayer of

The yegmen entered the building after a night watchman had gone off duty early Sunday morning, and evidently remained in the place more than an hour. Entrance was effected through a side door to the building, which was forced.
