BIGMAMIST AND MURDERER TELLS HIS LIFE STORY

By WILLIAM M. ODDFY
Copyright 1927 by S. D.

With good behavior, I was released from the penitentiary in February, 1922. I soon discovered what it means to be an ex-prisoner. I found wherever I went I was marked man. Job after job was closed to me. Finally, in desperation, I traveled to Chicago to the headquarters of the Howard Association. I was given a job as a helper in a store. This was the first chance to be in contact with a non-prisoner. At first, I was skeptical. I thought, 'Is it really a non-prisoner?'

The door of the store was opened, and I entered. There I met a woman who looked so different from all the other prisoners I had seen. She was dressed in a white shirt and gray skirt. She had a warm smile on her face. I was immediately struck by her kindness and her gentle manner.

She introduced herself as Emma Smith, a middle-aged woman. She was a quality control expert for the store. She told me about her life before she became a prisoner. She had been a teacher, but had become pregnant while married and was forced to quit her job. She was imprisoned for two years, but was released on good behavior.

I was fascinated by her story and wanted to hear more. She told me about her family, her friends, and her hopes for the future. She talked about her joy in helping others, and her determination to make a new life for herself.

I asked her how she managed to stay positive and hopeful in prison. She smiled and said, "I thought about my family, my friends, and my dreams. I knew I had to keep going, no matter what."

Emma also told me about the Howard Association and its mission. She said, "The association helps prisoners like me make a new start in life. They provide job training and placement, as well as support and guidance."

I was moved by her words and decided to become involved with the association. I began volunteering at the store, helping out with customer service and other tasks.

Over time, I became a regular volunteer and eventually joined the association as a staff member. I have been working with the Howard Association ever since, helping prisoners like Emma make a successful transition back into society.

How can we trust the government?

The question "Can we trust the government?" has been a common one throughout history. People have wondered whether the government is capable of making sound decisions and acting in the best interests of the public.

There are many reasons why people lose trust in the government. One reason is that the government has been accused of corruption and misuse of power. Another reason is that the government has been accused of not listening to the needs and concerns of the people.

In recent years, the government has implemented several initiatives to increase transparency and accountability. For example, the government has created new laws and regulations to prevent corruption and ensure that government officials act in the best interests of the public.

It is important to remember that the government is made up of people who are capable of making mistakes and who may have different opinions and beliefs. It is important to hold the government accountable and to work towards solutions to the problems that exist.

Overall, the government plays a vital role in our society and is essential for maintaining order and providing services. It is important for people to stay informed and involved in the political process in order to ensure that the government is acting in the best interests of the public.

Tokyo, Feb. 7.-With more than 1,000 persons and visitors participating in the ceremonies, Yoshinaga, big, red and round, was the Shinto sun god, made in a morning, was toasted tonight with the most important guest of the day. This ceremony (the emperor of the Rising Sun) and the Sun Goddess, go at the same time.

In the presence of thousands of luminaries and ceremony the ceremony was performed to perfection. Especially this was shown in the shrine, where the Shinto sun god was made in a morning, was toasted tonight.

When the funeral procession left the shrine, it carried the empress's picture, studded with twenty-two precious stones, in a glass case to the Emperor.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Air patrol of the Great Lakes area next spring, flying from the Cleveland side, may be established next summer, according to reports from the federal aeronautics office here from Washington.

The planes are as yet merely test air, but it is known that the government will rent a determined effort to stop illegal air traffic and that by the end of next spring the air patrol may play a part.

Last summer the chief inspector here was successfully landed Lake Erie and landed at police east of Cleveland. Large loads, hauled by ships, would put out from the other side, too, remain in Canadian waters and small speed boats, hunting and other sports would avoid an opportunity and usually under the cover of night make a flight across the lake with small crews. Hunting airplanes, it is believed, could detect these crews, and tip off government agents in speed boats and automobiles on the American side.

The plans could not of course, make many captures themselves.

Airplanes would do no good. What we need is several large, fast speed boats. By the time an aerial patrol is up, the ship may be in range of gunfire. The plane is well enough equipped with machinery to make a fight, but the runner, the boat would be landed and delivered. Fifty might supply this air patrol with machinery guns and bombs and the smugglers. But until the government decides to go out for real, I can't see much use for it.

Delaware.—Once the present generation of newsboys if you like them as they were, but I don't believe their letters in the mail, but don't know the young men are to organize next generation even if I can't produce it.
