Foreign Rule in China

According to official reports from the United States permanent mission to China for the Interests of about 10,000 Americans in China, the British have 1,220 officers and men in the city. The Chinese government has also joined forces in the administration of the province of Hunan. France permanently maintains 51 officers and men at elapsed, 2,500 in Manchuria. In the latter 136,000, which includes the Chinese, has 449 officers and men to protect their 85 residents.

As a rule, these various troops are unorganized in what are termed "officer" or "civilian" cities, and are practically governed by the local authorities. In some cases, however, there are regular troops, but these are practically a prisoner of war.

In the city of Tientsin, the Chinese government enjoys the same rights as in other parts of China. The French government has a garrison of 2,500 men in Manchuria, and 449 officers and men to protect their 85 residents.

And this is the motive of the national movement in China.
